

How have I changed?

How has this mission trip changed you? Many people have asked me this question. It is something that is not easily explained. It has to be experienced. When I was telling The Good Shepherd Godly Play story to the street children, my heart was touched beyond imagination. At one point in the story, I placed three black circles down on the green felt underlay. The “script” says to point to the circles and say that some people think this looks like a face. “See the dark eyes and mouth? In these eyes, there is no light. There is only darkness. It is a dangerous place.” As I looked up into the children’s big, dark eyes I couldn’t say the words. I couldn’t speak of the darkness and danger because in their eyes I saw light; the light of Jesus. The light in their eyes shines so brightly with the love and hope of Jesus Christ despite their circumstances. At that moment I just continued the story and knew that God had brought me here for this very moment.

There is hope for these children. They need our continued love and support. Please help keep the light in their eyes shining by continuing to show your support for this mission. God just may have a special “moment” in store for you!
